An Interesting Description of the Town and the Surrounding Country-History of the Mines.

RED LODGE, Feb. 17 .- [Special correspondence of the Independent]-We started for the coal mines at Red Lodge from Helena Tuesday evening, arriving at Laurel. a station on the Northern Pacific railroad about 5 o'clock the next morning. At Laurel the Rocky Fork & Cooke City INAUGURATION ANNOUNCEMENT railroad branches off from the Northern Pacific, and crosses the Yellowstone river two miles from the station. There is a temporary bridge across the river, which is considered very shaky and liable to go out at any time when the ice breaks up. A new structure is being put in as rapidly as possible and will be completed in a few days. 24 to March 3, inclusive, will have connec-After leaving the Yellowstone the railroad at all, and in some places the ties are several feet apart. The object of this company was to get the track laid across the reservation, as by the terms of their grant, the road must be constructed across the Indian lands before the 10th of March, 1889, or the charter was forfeited. It was graining a right of way across the reservation as places the reservation and the across the Indian lands before the 10th of March, 1889, or the charter was forfeited. undertake the hazardous and difficult work of constructing a railroad in midwinter.
But the pleasant weather that has prevailed up to a few days since, has made the work much less difficult than would have been the case under ordinary circumstances. Still the contractors have done remarkably well and much is due to the skill and dispatch exhibited by Messrs.
Green & Keefe, who have had the work in charge. The road will not be in condition Green & Keefe, who have had the work in charge. The road will not be in condition to furnish much fuel for this winter, but before another winter comes around the Rocky Fork coal will be supplied in such quantities as to settle forever the difficulty about fuel in this territory.

The town of Red Lodge was a great surplies to your correspondent. Five years about fuel in this territory.

The town of Red Lodge was a great surprise to your correspondent. Five years ago I made a trip to Red Lodge. We rode our horses from Bozeman to the Boulder river and across the reservation to the place where Red Lodge now stands. There was then only one cabin which was occupied by Mr. E. S. Benton, an employee of Messrs. Cooper & Cook, who was watching the coal mines for those gentlemen. Now there is a town of some 500 people, with comfortable and comparatively commodious houses, stores, saloons, restaurants and lodging houses, and all the accompanaments of civilization. The main street is very wide, with an abundance of room for the railroad track, and the houses and other buildings are built on both sides of it. The coal mines employ about 100 miners at this time, and good industrious men who understand the business of coal mining finds read employment at good wages. But, of course, a great many tramps and idle men have found their way into the place and those give to the visitor at first the impression that there are a great many men out of employment. The town is built on the Rocky Fork bottom, a valley about half a mile wide, and on both sides rise the bluffs in which lies the coal mines. Long before this portion of the Crow reservation was thrown open for settlement, which occurred in 1882, it was known among the hunters and other white men who had occasion to visit this section that there was a large quantity of fuel coal in the hills on the east side of the Rocky Fork, and the coal from these mines had been used for years by the occasional visitor When, therefore, the ceded portion of the reservation was thrown open for settlement, James George, who refoices in the soubriquet of by the occasional visitor When, thereby the ceded portion of the reservation was thrown open for settlement, James George, who rejoices in the soubriqued of "Yankee Jim," from the fact, I presume, that he was born in Virginia and never saw New England, located a tract of land as a coal claim, taking in with him in the location, three citizens of Gallatin county. These original claimants opened up the vein somewhat, and some time in 1883 Mr. Walter Cooper and Hon. Samuel Word took a bond on the mines from George and his associates. These gentlemen did considerable work on the veins and established the fact that this was an immense body of coal, extending from the Rocky Fork a cross the hills east to Clarke's Fork, a distance of from seven to eight miles. As the news of these discoveries became circulated abroad experts in the employ of the Northern Pacific railroad and other companies visited the mines and the body of coal was found to be of vast extent and of the finest quality. Messrs. Cooper and Word, having satisfied themselves of the undoubted value of their property, organized a company and continued their developments, having paid the amount due on the bond and succeeded to the rights of the first locators. The story of the first attempt to build the Rocky Fork & Cooke City railroad a year ago and the unfortunate delay of the work on account of the financial difficulties of that company are well known. At length Mr. Hauser took hold of the enterprise, and with his magic touch smoothed over all the difficulties, and two months from the time he first took hold of it the Rocky Fork & Cooke City railroad is an accomplished fact.

Montana owes much to Mr. Hauser, but the Montana central and Butte, leaving the lettens and vist the Montana Central and Butte, leaving the leave at the same and allow stopoer privileges in both direct from the time he first took hold of it the Rocky Fork & Cooke City railroad is an accomplished fact.

Montana owes much to Mr. Hauser, but not the least of his deeds is the building of this railroad and the opening up to the people of Montana of a supply of the cheapest and best fuel to be found in the northwest. The coal which is found in the Rocky Fork is a lignite; still when exposed to the air it does not slack as is usual with lignite, but retains its firmness and burns with as much brilliancy as when first mined. The coal is also perfectly clean and free from dust, and burns clearly without clinkers, being reduced in the stove to refuse ash. The heating qualities are excellent, and it contains sufficient resinous matter to make a bright cheerful fire, suitable for an open grate. The coal, of course, is used exclusively in Red Lodge and all who burn it are extravagant in their praise of it.

The original discovery of coal was on the east side of the creek, but a miner who had studied the formation of the country, becoming satisfied that there was coal on the west side of the creek also, commenced excavating, and a few feet below the surface found the same vein as appeared on the east side. The veins are all blanket, with a slight dip to the north, and lie a few feet apart, one along the other. The total thickness of the veins along the level of the creek is about seven feet. There are five veins, the thickest being twenty-four feet of solid, clean coal. The mines on the east side are owned by the Rocky Fork Coal company. Those on the west by a company of Helena gentlemen. While the Helena gentlemen have no railroad to their mines, they certainly have a bonanza in this coal property, especially as the Chiego & Northwestern railroad and the Union Pacific railroad are both reported to be looking with covetous eyes on these coal fields.

Around Red Lodge is a fine agricultural and grazing country, with an abundant supply of water and a rich soil. Below on the reservation are the finest bottom lands in the eastern part of this territory. Iron is also found in abundance in the mountains to the south. Up at the head of Clarke's Fork and Rocky Fork are the famous mines of Cooke City. It is among the probabilities that the Rocky Fork railroad will be built into Cooke City before long, when Red Lodge, with its coal, iron, limestone and abundant water supply will be a very desirable point for iron works or smelters for the Cooke City ores.

There was a great snowfall during the time that i was on my journey, and it was difficult for me to make an extended examination of the country surrounding the town, but my former visit revealed to me enough to satisfy me that the Rocky Fork and history of Montana.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 20.—Last Tuesday one of August Penmame's children bought some meat at a butcher shop. She was given a piece of half snoked sausage, of which she and her two sisters ate quite heartily. Later they became quite ill and were removed to the hospital. Thursday Gertrude, aged 9, and Marguerite, aged 5, died, and Freida, aged 8, is not expected to recover. The other younger daughter and a fourteen-months-old child, who ate sparingly of the sausage, were taken with convilsions, but will recover.

A Terrible Misfortune.

It is a calamity of the direst kind to feel the prime of life-to feel more nerve'ess. more dispirited, weaker every day. Yet this is the unhappy lot of hundreds who surround us. A source of renewed strength which science approves, in behalf of which multitudes of the debilitated have and are every day testifying, and which, in countless instances, has built up constitutions sapped by weakness and infirmity and long unbenefitted by other means, surely commends itself to all who need a tonic. Full information regarding the Pennsylvania service can be obtained upon application to C. W. Adams, assistant general passenger agent, 65 Clark street, Chicago, Ili.

To Fight the Will. CHICAGO, Feb. 20.-The will of the late Charles J. Hull, a wealthy real estate owner, bequeathing an estate estimated at $2, 000,000 to $5,000,000 to Helen Culver, the housekeeper of the deceased, was filed here to-day for probate. The will will be contested by relations, who are nephews, nieces, grand-nephews and grand-nieces, fifteen in number, including Ida M. Frendy, Charles A., Ida and Hortense Narramore, of California, children of Eben Narramore, the deceased son of testator's daughter Eunice.
